Recruiters and Hiring Managers at Apple,

My name is Irvanjit Singh Gill and I am a recent graduate from the University of Waterloo's Electrical and Computer Engineering program.

The University of Waterloo is renowned for its internship program that allows students to gain relevant experience before graduating. While completing my degree, I was fortunate to have been able to work at several large and small companies across North America and in various software-focused technical roles, and gained almost three years of industry experience while learning and growing as an engineer.

My time at Apple was especially memorable, and is the reason that I am writing this letter and wish to return as a full-time employee. When I first began my internship, we were told during orientation that working (full-time) at Apple would be an opportunity for us to do some of our best work, and throughout my internship, I was able to witness just that. Every engineer that I met had a passion for Apple, its products, and its vision that I had yet to see anywhere else. The engineers that I worked with and around had so much knowledge and experience that I could learn from, but they were also genuinely excited about the projects that they were working on. This is the sort of environment that I want to be in to be able to do my best work.

I first had the opportunity to use Apple products in primary school; our computer labs had iMac G3's, but it wasn't until 2009 that I had the opportunity to purchase my first MacBook. It was the most worthwhile purchase I had ever made. What drew me to Apple's products was the focus on quality and the idea of crafting the best user-experience possible. This is a principle that I have tried to strive for whilst worked on my own small projects. I can't wait to be able to bring that drive for quality and perfection to the teams at Apple, and have an opportunity to do some of my best work.

Thank-you for your time,
-Irvanjit
